In collaboration with our community partner Whitman-Walker Health (WWH) and Gallaudet University, The PRIDE Study Communications Specialist Darren Arquero worked with WWH summer intern Becka Pittard to produce a video to engage LGBTQ people who speak American Sign Language (ASL).

Of more than 16,000 participants in The PRIDE Study, only 181 report being deaf. We'd like to change that – Join us!

BREATHE easy, transmasculine friends!

The practice of binding can be an important part of gender expression – but because research is lacking in this area, we don't yet know enough about how binding can minimize negative impacts to physical health.

A new study called BREATHE (Binding Research to Advance Transmasculine Health) seeks to understand how to make binding safer and how to ensure transmasculine people who bind are more informed and more empowered. BREATHE is designed for people who identify as trans/nonbinary and who practice binding or have used a binder in the past five years – and as our cohort comes together we hope to create a space for participants to build community with other trans folks who bind. The PRIDE Study is honored to partner with the University of Michigan Center for Sexual and Health Disparities to learn more about binding practices among transmasculine-spectrum members of our community.

Data at your fingertips, for All of Us

Privacy is a top priority for the All of Us Research Program, and the program has committed to storing data using extremely high security measures as it builds one of the largest biomedical data resources of its kind. All of Us has also committed to ensuring that the data collected is available widely and not just to professional researchers, so that everyone can learn more about the type of data participants are providing.

PRIDENet is a proud partner in the All of Us Research Program. We're placing a special emphasis this year on helping educate LGBTQ+ communities and researchers about this resource so you can navigate, access, and use the data in the Research Hub's Data Browser. Please contact us if you want to co-host a Community Listening Session with your constituents about the data browser and give input on concerns and opportunities for learning more about our health.

PS – October is LGBT History Month! Visit The PRIDE Study site to learn more about critical milestones in the fight for equality and to reflect on our hard-won victories. Then, take YOUR place in LGBT History by enrolling in The PRIDE Study, the first large-scale, long-term national study of people in the SGM community.
